A note about chords above the staff:

When a chord appears as an inversion, the letter on the left indicates the chord value and the letter on the right indicates the note in the bass. Example: D/F# means for piano you play a D in the right hand and an F# in the left hand; for guitar you play a D chord and add an F# in the bass by putting your thumb or middle finger on fret 2 of the low-E string.
